

The image shows the front cover of an antique book. The cover is bound in a dark brown, heavily worn leather. The surface is decorated with intricate, blind-tooled floral and foliate patterns, possibly of Islamic or Persian origin. The leather shows signs of age, with some scuffing and discoloration, particularly in the upper left quadrant. The spine of the book is visible on the left side, showing traditional raised bands. A small, white rectangular label is affixed to the bottom left corner of the cover. A metal fastener or clip is visible on the right edge of the book.
