the day before he was born and in the evening he carried his mother's skeleton, still in her shroud, across the floor. So that when she died he had to prepare her shroud. He had to make it himself, because he had no one else to do it.

Xxxviii

Anticipating his next visitation, the old woman made a small casket of pine wood, fibrous, dried, and smoothed, and when she went off to her new abode, she took it with her.
