

Inhalt.

	Seite
I. Allgemeines über das Schulwesen des Mittelalters . . .	1—5
II. Die Bernburger Stadtschule	5—66
1. Im Zeitalter der Reformation	5—14
a. Schule und Unterricht	5—12
b. Die ältesten Rektoren	12—14
2. In der Zeit des großen Religionskrieges	14—24
a. Bis zum westfälischen Frieden	14—20
b. Bis zum Schlusse des 17. Jahrhunderts	20—24
3. Die Zeit der Reformen	24—51
a. In der ersten Hälfte des 18. Jahrhunderts	24—30
b. Bis zum Ende des 18. Jahrhunderts	30—51
α) Der Niedergang der Anstalt und die Schulordnung von 1774	35—39
β) Philanthropinische Versuche unter dem Rektorate Krohne's	39—45
γ) Das Rektorat Starke's und der Neuhumanismus	45—51
4. Der Ausbau zum Gymnasium unter dem Rektorate Herzog's	51—66

IV

In Schuler's 'The History of the People of the United States', the author traces the development of the American people from the early days of the settlement of the continent to the present.
He shows how the American people have developed from a rude and uncivilized state to a nation of free and equal citizens. He shows how the American people have developed from a dependence on the mother country to a complete independence. He shows how the American people have developed from a state of ignorance and superstition to a state of enlightenment and progress. He shows how the American people have developed from a state of poverty and oppression to a state of wealth and freedom. He shows how the American people have developed from a state of weakness and division to a state of strength and unity.

The author's argument is that the American people have developed as a result of their own efforts and the help of their friends. He shows how the American people have overcome all the difficulties and obstacles that have stood in their way. He shows how the American people have created a new and better world
for themselves. He shows how the American people have become a nation of free and equal citizens,
and how they have achieved all the goals and
ambitions that they set for themselves.

The author's argument is that the American people have developed as a result of their own efforts and the help of their friends. He shows how the American people have overcome all the difficulties and obstacles
that have stood in their way. He shows how the American people have created a new and better world
for themselves. He shows how the American people have become a nation of free and equal citizens,
and how they have achieved all the goals and
ambitions that they set for themselves.