

JK

Christiansburg

The town of Christiansburg was founded in 1786 by James Patton, a prominent Virginia planter and politician. It was established as a trading post for the Shenandoah Valley and grew rapidly due to its strategic location on the Great Valley Road. The town's early development was centered around commerce and trade, with many of its residents engaged in the mercantile business. Over the years, Christiansburg has become a significant center of industry and education in the region.