SIR THOMAS HOLAND SECOND EARL OF KENT.

King Edward conferred the Garter, vacant by the death of lord Mohun in 1375, upon sir Thomas Holand, the eldest son of the princess of Wales by her former husband, Thomas Holand (in her right) earl of Kent, and one of the Founders.

This nobleman, who was ten years old at the demise of his distinguished father in 1360, married, in his sixteenth year, the lady Alice Fitzalan, daughter of Richard earl of Arundel,<sup>2</sup> and immediately afterwards joined the army of the Black Prince in Aquitaine.<sup>3</sup> Being in 1367 in the expedition into Spain, he received knighthood at the hands of his illustrious stepfather, under the walls of Vittoria, after the trumpets had sounded for the marshalling of the host;<sup>4</sup> and he is named among the gallant chiefs who in the memorable battle of Najara fought near the person of the prince.<sup>5</sup>

Sir Thomas Holand accompanied the earl of Cambridge and the duke of Britanny in the expedition which landed THOMAS SECOND EARL OF KENT.

&lt;sup>1</sup> Robes of the Order were issued to him as "sir Thomas de Holand," in 50 and 51 Ed. 3 [1376, 1377]; and 1 Ric. 2, 1378.—Wardrobe accounts for those years now in the Queen's Remembrancer's office.

THOMAS SECOND EARL OF KENT. near Saint Mahé, at the beginning of Lent in 1374-5,¹ and the successful operations of which were suspended by intelligence of the truce between England and France concluded at Bruges on the 27th June following.² It was probably soon after his return with the army into England,³ that our knight was admitted into the Order of the Garter.

A manuscript * of Froissart states that Richard II, at his coronation, created his brother Thomas Holand earl of Kent; but the statement is at variance with the well-known history of the dignity, which was at that period vested in the princess his mother. He obtained, by the description of "Thomas de Holand" only, a grant of 2001. per annum in 1378; and served in that year in the fleet which, after cruising in the Channel during the attempted invasion from France, landed troops at St. Malo. He was, in the same year, appointed warden of all the forests south of Trent. In 1379 he was a commissioner to settle the compensations for infractions of the truce between England and Scotland; and in 1380 was sent to Guernsey to inspect the fortifications of the castle. His income was augmented, by a grant of various rents, to to 10001. per annum; and he was constituted marshal of England.

Having been shortly afterwards nominated one of the ambassadors to negotiate in Flanders a matrimonial alliance between the king and Anne of Bohemia, 12 the style of earl of Kent (to which dignity he was heir apparent) was, doubtless with the assent of his mother, ascribed to him in an instrument dated 12th January 1380-1, empowering him and the bishop of Hereford to grant safe conduct to the emperor's ambassadors coming to Calais; 13 and, on the 16th July following, he was first summoned to parliament as earl of Kent. 14 His name, with that title and the additional designation of marshal of England, first appears on the parliament roll, on the 7th November

1381, amongst those of the triers of petitions;1 and we find him, subsequently, attending in his place in parliament, and exercising the office of marshal, until 1384.2

Joan princess of Wales, his and the king's mother, dying on the 7th August 1385,3 the earl was by inquisition found to be her heir and of the age of thirty years and upwards, and had thereupon livery of her extensive possessions.4 He then surrendered the office of marshal, which was conferred upon Thomas Mowbray earl of Nottingham. In that year he attended the king on his grand expedition into Scotland;5 and, about the 10th November, upon a rumour that the enemy meditated an attempt to recover Calais, he was sent thither to place the town in a proper state for defence.6

The name of the earl occurs for the last time, in the records of parliament, in 1393.7 In 1396 he was appointed governor of Carisbrook castle for life,8 a charge which he did not hold long; for he died on the 25th of April 1397, having on Easterday, the 22nd of that month, made his will9 by the title of "earl of Kent and lord Wake," and appointed his sepulture in Brune abbey, Dorsetshire.10

We find, by the extant wardrobe accounts, that robes of the Garter were delivered to him as sir Thomas de Holand, in 1376, 1377, and 1378; and, as earl of Kent, in 1384; annually from 1386 to 1390, both years inclusive, and in 1393 and 1394,11

By Alice Fitzalan, his countess, he left two sons, Thomas 12 third earl of Kent, afterwards duke of Surrey, and Edmund 13 fourth earl, both knights of this Order. He had also five daughters, who, or whose representatives, became his co-heirs upon the failure of issue from their brothers; they were - 1. Eleanor, wife of Roger Mortimer, fourth earl of March; 2. Joan, wife successively of Edmond of Langley duke of York, William lord Willoughby d'Eresby, Henry lord Scrope of Masham, and
